Lube cans and chemical drums both present significant labeling challenges. Ingredients can be oily, corrosive, and potentially dangerous, and container surfaces can make adhesion difficult.

Consumer and industrial electronics get faster, more compact and more powerful with each passing year. Manufacturers in these industries are challenged to source adhesive materials that can meet increasingly demanding operating parameters.

Jetson Label applies its material expertise in applications such as sound and vibration dampening, high shock absorption, water proofing and very high temperature resistance. Our expertise is used to engineer thinner, lighter and higher performing adhesive materials that meet the demanding standards of the electronics industry.
